

People are constantly trying to improve their lives through the use of technology. Examples of this include the transision of paper to electronic documents, the horse to the automobile, salesmen to websites and spam. Now what if we wanted techonology to improve the very concept of being alive? What if we wanted something better than life? Perhaps transfferring our bodies and mind to a computer program.